Israel struck by Iraqi missile

■ A Scud hits Tel Aviv. Two more POWs are displayed on Iraqi TV.

(AP) — An enemy missile hit suburban Tel Aviv Tuesday, killing at least three. Baghdad exhibited two more captured American pilots Tuesday, bringing the official number of POWs to nine.

Patriot missiles intercepted some Iraqi Scud missiles fired at Israel, but one Scud landed in the Jewish state, the military command said.

In addition to exhibiting the POWs, Baghdad claimed it had downed more allied planes and promised suicide bombings to avenge what it called attacks on Muslim shrines.

American television networks reported that there appeared to be casualties in the Tel Aviv attack.

Residents in suburban Tel Aviv reported hearing a roar similar to the sound of low-flying warplanes, followed by an explosion.

There was no evidence that any chemical weapons were used.

It was the third Iraqi missile attack on the Israel since Friday. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had threatened to strike Israel in retaliation for the U.S.-led war effort in the Persian Gulf.

The two captured American fliers were identified as Air Force Maj. Jeffrey Scott Tice and Capt. Harry Michael Roberts.

They were listed by the Pentagon Sunday as missing in action.

The two POWs were exhibited on Iraqi TV broadcasts Monday night and Tuesday, according to an Iranian TV report which showed film clips.

Official Baghdad radio broadcast the pilots' remarks. One man could be heard to say that his F-16E, based in Doha, Qatar, had been shot down by a surface-to-air missile while on a mission to hit an oil refinery near Baghdad.

The Iraqis also claimed 23 allied war planes or missiles were shot down on Tuesday, for a total of more than 160 downed allied planes. The allies have reported 15 combat aircraft losses and two in technical malfunctions.

Iraqi military communiques listed 24 allied air raids from See GULF, page 8

Children were among the 1,000 people who formed the LIFE CHAIN.

Pro-life supporters form human chain

By Michelle Hertig
Staff Writer

More than 1,000 men, women and children lined the sidewalks of Santa Rosa and Monterey streets in San Luis Obispo Sunday to form a "LIFE CHAIN" in the shape of a cross.

"This is the first time for a LIFE CHAIN in San Luis Obispo," said Bill Spence, media spokesperson for the Central Coast Christian Action Council, the event's sponsor.

"We have over 30 churches from the county participating today," Spence said.

Please Let Me Live, a non-profit pro-life organization based in Yuba City, Calif., launched the first LIFE CHAIN in 1987. Since then, many other LIFE CHAINS have been formed in cities throughout California. Residents of San Diego formed a LIFE CHAIN last March that spanned 15 miles.

The San Luis Obispo LIFE CHAIN was part of a nationwide observance of Sanctity of Human Life Sunday.

Participants of the LIFE CHAIN lined both sides of the streets, holding signs that read "Abortion Kills Children" and "Jesus Loves and Forgives."

LIFE CHAIN participants were met with some opposition when motorists honked their horns in disapproval. Other passersby who disagreed displayed pro-choice signs and gave the thumbs down signal to LIFE CHAIN supporters.

Pro-choice advocates hold vigil

By Grant A. Landy

A candlelight vigil for abortion and women's rights brightened the Mission Plaza Amphitheatre Monday night, kicking off the 1991 campaign for pro-choice activists.

In celebration of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, more than 40 supporters lined the amphitheatre with candles listening to representatives from the National Organization for Women (NOW) and Planned Parenthood of San Luis Obispo County.

"Women are in great danger of losing their constitutional right of abortion," NOW's San Luis Obispo Chapter Coordinator Pat Renshaw said. "Hospitals and clinics are closing doors to women wanting abortions."

Renshaw outlined the Roe vs. Wade decision, which gave women the constitutional right to privacy and consultation with a physician in the abortion procedures. Webster v. Reproductive Health Services in 1989 gave the right back to the states to decide whether abortion was a right protected by the constitution. Because of Webster, Renshaw fears a growing number of unwanted pregnancies and illegal abortions.

"There have been over 30 million unwanted pregnancies from contraceptive failure," she said. "Now states can make abortion illegal."

Liz Aphelberg, San Luis Obispo Planned Parenthood coordinator, posed the question of what to do with an un-

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Peace groups aren't majority

As I continue to read the "Mustang Pravda Daily," it comes as no surprise to me that this apparatchik has been exploited as another pulpit for the anti-war movement. Allow me my First Amendment right for the moment and let me speak. First off, let me say that many of us here on campus do not support the anti-war faction. Thank goodness we're not the utopia-driven, Birkenstock-wearing crowd that has ears constantly ringing with leftover slogans from the '60s and wearing circled upside-down bent-cross peace symbol or going around burning American flags to show contempt for our legally elected, majority-chosen government.

Political differences aside, I do have some questions for you pacifistic types: Where the hell were you people during the past five months when this conflict was about to erupt? If you think that you have the majority voice on the political front, then why did the majority of Congress vote in favor of President Bush's war effort? Also, why do close to 80 percent or more of the population (according to various media polls) favor the war? Only after the fact (on Jan. 15 deadline) were you able to rally together, but at the last minute? Come on. All over San Luis Obispo, whether at Cal Poly making peace signs in front of the Admin building or at the County Library where Mustang journalist Steve Jones was cackling out his "students will make a difference" speech, you people have put on a very impressive phalanx. On the statewide scene, you've been able to make many commuters mad, sitting down blocking traffic or upsetting veterans (like myself) by having dishonorable traitors like ex-Marine Corporal Paterson cheering on the A WOL crowd. OK, I hear you loud and clear, right through the ear wax. But shouting notwithstanding, can your organization convince me that your so-called peace movement has political clout? Hey, as you are ranting out diatribal sermons of the left wing platform, make some sort of political organization, unite and exercise your democratic right to vote! Nineteen-ninety-two is just around the corner. Chances are that President Bush will be running for re-election, and the Congress you despise will be up for the ballot. If you can, field someone like Michael Dukakis, Jimmy Carter or Jane Fonda. You might lease my ear then without numbing it. However, if 1992 produces essentially the same congressional and executive branches that are here in 1991, then I can continue to dismiss the anti-war movement as a bunch of organized loudmouths feeling the need to vent hot air where the best service to be provided is helping the Goodyear Tire Company to fill their blimps.

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

Students must speak out against fee hikes now

"The public is rightfully demanding more bang for their buck. In this budget, they are going to get it," said Gov. Pete Wilson when he introduced his budget proposal on Jan. 10, 1991.

It is my guess that Gov. Wilson said those words with his fingers crossed behind his back.

It is also my guess that

Gov. Wilson has absolutely no idea of the needs of the California State University system.

The governor wants to raise your fees $52 a quarter. The question that I asked the governor's deputy press secretary was would these fee hikes be enough for the CSU to continue to operate as is? The answer I was given was "yes." That answer was false.

The real fact is that even with those massive fee hikes, there will not be enough money to begin to cover the cuts Wilson's office wants. Coincidentally, the governor's office does not consider this to be a major fee hike.

The Board of Trustees for the CSU, of which Wilson is an ex officio member, said it needed an additional $113 million in funding just to maintain the status quo. That money would go to pay for a 5 percent salary hike for the fine staff at Cal Poly as well as for President Baker. That money would also cover natural increases in costs, in other words inflation.

There is no question that the employees here deserve a raise. They are hard working people and they help make this university run. They will get their well deserved raise regardless of the cuts imposed on the CSU.

So where will the cuts come from? The cuts will come from Cal Poly students through additional fees.

Instead of paying more to get more, we will be asked to pay more and accept less in services.

The governor's proposal does not even main

By Michael Belgard

tain the status quo. The status quo is not that great to begin with. We can all testify to that after trying, futilely, to get any kind of general education classes. People are forced to wait until they have senior priority to take freshman classes. The school does not have the resources to offer enough of those courses which it requires us to take.

Next fall should be even more interesting if Wilson has his way. With 12th priority you might be lucky enough to get into the night section of underwater basket weaving (the day section was full).

But according to the governor's office, these cuts are not major. Of course this is the same governor's office that was not aware of the salary increases and was not aware of the Maddy Act, a law designed to protect CSU students from politicians like Pete Wilson.

Gov. Wilson is following in the footsteps of his predecessor, George "Let's build another prison" Deukmejian. Deukmejian slapped a $182-a-year fee hike on CSU students his first year in office while prisons sprouted up like crab grass all over the state.

In 1981, a mere 10 years ago, CSU students paid only $160 a year. Today that fee has increased nearly five-fold. Wilson would take that figure to $936 or nearly six-fold. That is outrageous.

Enough is enough. The time has come for the students of the CSU to stand up and not accept these runaway fee hikes.

The time has come for all of us to write our state senator, our state assemblyman and our governor and tell them that we are not going to take it.

Michael Belgard is a journalism junior.

Gorbachev rejects all crackdown charges

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Tuesday reaffirmed his reform policies and rejected allegations that the military crackdown in the Baltic republics meant he was exerting dictatorial powers.

Gorbachev, reading a prepared statement at a news conference, said military attacks on civilians in the Baltic republics the past two weeks resulted from unconstitutional activities "and not because of any mythical commands from above."

Report puts Hussein's family in Switzerland

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — A German newspaper said Tuesday there were indications President Saddam Hussein of Iraq had sent his family to Switzerland.

The mass-circulation Bild quoted an Iraqi exile it did not identify as saying he saw Saddam's wife, Sajida, and "other family members" Monday in Gstaad, an exclusive resort.

It said the Iraqi mission to the United Nations has been seeking to rent a house in Gstaad "for a long stay."

Postage rate will rise to 29 cents on Feb. 3

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of mailing a letter will jump to 29 cents on Feb. 3, the U.S. Postal Service said Tuesday.

The announcement by the Postal Service governs the complex, 11-month process of raising postage rates.

The decision boosts first-class postage from a quarter to 29 cents for the first ounce and from 20 cents to 23 cents for each additional ounce. The price of mailing a post card will rise from 15 cents to 19 cents.

Increases will affect other classes, as well.

Supreme Court OKs drilling restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court, rejecting an oil industry appeal, ruled Wednesday that cities and counties may restrict onshore facilities used in offshore oil and gas exploration.

The ruling stemmed from the appeal of a decision by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appellate court had rejected a challenge to the local governments by the Western Oil and Gas Association and the National Ocean Industries Association. The two groups represent, respectively, companies seeking oil and gas on the Outer Continental Shelf and companies that provide them supplies and services.

Montana's surgery declared a success

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana underwent surgery Tuesday to repair a bone in his right hand, broken in Sunday's NFC Championship against the New York Giants.

As Montana was sacked with 10 minutes left in the game, the fifth metacarpal in his throwing hand was broken, about an inch below the base of the little finger.

Two screws were inserted in Montana's hand during a successful surgery, performed at Sequoia Hospital.

Doctors said Montana will be in a cast for about four weeks. The screws will be removed in about two months, and he will be able to begin throwing about a month after that.

Residents stock up on rice, gas masks

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Some residents struck by war jitters are reaching for gas masks and others are reaching for 50-pound sacks of rice, said Chinatown merchants.

Deprivation in past wars seems to contribute to the sales hike — particularly apparent among older people, grocers said.

The heavy buying began before the Jan. 15 U.N. deadline, but it has been building ever since.

Alternatives to fossil fuels must be considered

Energy efficiency will be on the minds of many Americans in the months to come because of the war with Iraq.

There is, however, more than one source of energy that Americans can turn to in order to heat their homes.

The Pacific Energy Company of San Luis Obispo, started in 1980, provides consumers with alternatives to fossil fuels. Its founder John Ewan, a 1973 Cal Poly graduate, sells solar electric and water heating systems and Environmental Protection Agency certified wood-burning stoves.

wanted pregnancy: "Who is going to decide? Is it going to be the government? The fanatics? Or should it be left to each one of us?"

As the candles of pro-choice supporters burned, a group of pro-life supporters created an arc around the theatre, holding signs and humming songs. One sign read, "When they tell you that abortion is a matter just between a woman and her doctor, they're forgetting someone."

Grant Hardgrave, a Cal Poly civil engineering junior, said that he and his pro-life supporters were there to make a stand for what's right. "We want the public to know that not everyone advocates the positions they stand for," Hardgrave said.

Renshaw said that most of the anti-abortion legislation is affecting the poor because funds for clinics and hospitals are being cut off. "There has been a 93 percent cut in funding for public facilities," she said.

Hardgrave said that a lot of the pro-choice information was inaccurate. He believed that they were clouding the issue of right and wrong with the question of choice. "We are not against choice, we are for life," Hardgrave and his supporters said.

Renshaw urged that the right of women to decide was fundamental and vital.

"What kind of message are we giving to young women?" she said. "While women are becoming doctors and lawyers, many women and girls will be forced into parenthood. No one in a democratic society has the right to take away anyone's rights."

LIFE CHAIN

Teri Lewis, a downtown sales clerk who saw the LIFE CHAIN in front of the store where she works, said she thought it was unfair to involve children who do not know what abortion is.

"There are bigger issues to be protesting right now with the war," Lewis said.

But opposition did not surprise Spence. "We always anticipate resistance and instruct participants to offer love to people that oppose our cause," he said. "We instruct people to simply smile back and wave."

Sanctity of Human Life Sunday was purposely planned to take place two days before the 18th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court's Roe v. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

Trash and Burn:

Cal Poly searches for ways to deal with mounting garbage woes.

By D.A. Arviso

Each time a soda can or bottle is thrown into the trash, valuable landfill space and money is being used. And each time computer paper and newspaper at Cal Poly is not recycled, disposal budget costs rise.

Although recycling efforts on campus are increasing, the volume of waste from Cal Poly going to the landfill has not changed. What has changed are the rising costs of waste disposal.

Last year Cal Poly sent about 12,000 tons of domestic waste to Cold Canyon Landfill. The university paid about $154,000 to send the refuse. Cold Canyon is filling up and has raised its rates 30 percent. Hazardous waste costs increased by as much as 50 percent last year.

Norman Jacobson, Cal Poly energy and utilities coordinator, said these rates will continue to increase.

Last year Cal Poly produced an average of 80 tons of domestic waste per week, said Tom Martin, Mission Country Disposal controller. The transportation cost alone was $2,656 per week.

Cal Poly's waste volume is among the top three generated by any business in San Luis Obispo, Martin said. The county throws away the most trash followed by Cal Poly and the California Men's Colony.

Although the Campus Recycling Coalition (CRC) is currently recycling bottles, aluminum and paper, domestic waste costs and volume continue to rise, Jacobson said.

"Refuse costs are all going up because there is too much waste going into landfills," Jacobson said.

CRC attempts to combat the waste problem by recycling more bottles and aluminum this year. The Coalition received a $28,000 grant from the State Department of Conservation. They bought new recycling receptacles and distributed them at 73 locations on campus. The grant also was used for publicity and education at Cal Poly.

"The primary motive (for recycling) is that it makes me feel good that energy is not being wasted," CRC Grant Manager Myles O'Kelly said.

"Because we are not self-reliant for energy is the reason we are going to the (Persian) Gulf."

Last year CRC recycled 1.6 tons of aluminum and .7 tons of glass, CRC Chairperson Rick Best said. In 1990, CRC earned about $2,500 from aluminum and glass.

CRC is not the only organization recycling on campus. San Luis Recycling Company began collecting paper at Cal Poly during fall quarter. Each week between 1,600 and 1,700 pounds of high-grade, white computer paper was recycled by San Luis Recycling, CRC Vice-Chairperson Jay Smith said. Between 500 and 600 pounds of newspaper also were recycled each week by the company.

"It's (recycling) a very simple thing to do," Smith said. "Recycling is the most reasonable way of cutting down our use of natural resources."

Paper is picked up at different departments on campus, at Pacific Gas and Electric Company and at Cuesta College. The paper is consolidated, separated manually at the processing yard and shipped twice weekly to Los Angeles paper mills. San Luis Recycling earned $1,211 in gross sales last quarter.

"The program is about 85 percent in place," Smith said. "We are trying to have all employees have access to recycling containers."

Smith said the Administration building generates the most paper on campus because it houses the payroll office and many computers.

"The people in the Administration building have been real cooperative," Smith said. "Everyone I've spoken with has been supportive."

With increased education, Smith hopes to see students recycling in the dorms, University Union and other public areas. Another item on the CRC wish list is a cardboard bailer.

"The best thing that the university can do is buy a cardboard bailer," Smith said.

Cardboard from the dumpster could be recycled, but it is not economic to salvage, Jacobson said. The market for cardboard is not large enough, and the school cannot afford a bailer or staff to operate it. The cardboard must be bailed and separated before it is sold.

The Cal Poly Foundation currently recycles some cardboard at ECOSLO Recycling Center. ECOSLO owns the only cardboard bailer in San Luis Obispo.

Cal Poly's hazardous and toxic waste costs almost doubled this year. Administration, transportation and disposal costs increased from $80,000 to $140,000 this year, Jacobson said. He attributes the increase to new requirements and legislation from state, federal and local governments. The Environmental Protection Agency revises the hazardous waste list annually. Disposal of the additional items considered hazardous becomes very expensive when they are no longer considered domestic waste, Jacobson said.

"It's (hazardous waste) a very volatile entity to manage," he said. "The cost of hazardous waste varies by type."

North State Environmental Company transports hazardous and toxic waste from five locations on campus, including the Health Center. Health Services Director James Nash said the San Francisco company incinerates the waste at exceedingly high heat.

"It (incineration) doesn't contaminate the air," Nash said. "There is little debris, if any, left over."

The Health Center generates no more than two bags of infectious waste per day, said Joan Cirone, an administrator of Health Services. There has been no change in volume for two years, she said.

"Infectious waste is anything that has been involved with a person's body," Nash said.

The Health Center laboratory generates a lot of waste, Nash said. The cost of disposal to the university is high.

"We are well within the current guidelines, and we were well exceeding the new guidelines before they were issued," Nash said.

Other hazardous wastes generated by Cal Poly include used oil, inorganic and organic chemicals, pesticide rinse, blood samples and needles. Transportation and disposal costs vary with each item.

One form of waste that does not require transportation to landfills is animal refuse, which stays at Cal Poly. Manure from the swine and beef cattle units recycles onto the land as fertilizer, said John Algeo, head of the animal science and industry department.

"Instead of buying fertilizer, we try to keep organic matter in the soil," Algeo said. "It accepts water better."

At the swine unit, manure is recycled into aerobic ponds. The water from the ponds is used as irrigation and pumped to the fields. When the pond is drained the excess sludge is used at Cal Poly or sold to fertilizer companies.

"The farm crew makes excellent use of the manures we have," Algeo said.

Animal waste from the slaughterhouse goes to the rendering works. After the fat is taken out, the matter is sold to gardeners, he said.

Since the university is one of the area's biggest creators of waste, Smith said, a greater campus-wide approach to recycling definitely would benefit our environment.

As recycling efforts increase, students could find themselves throwing more trash into recycling bins than garbage bins.

practical alternatives to electricity and gas," Ewan said.

"It does seem somewhat ironic that another energy crisis in the Persian Gulf coincides with our 10th Anniversary and is once again putting energy alternatives back on the front page," he said.

Another reason for opening the company was to take a stand against the dangers of nuclear energy.

Recently, EPA-certified wood-burning stoves have increased in popularity, Ewan said.

In the past decade, between new technologies and EPA regulations, wood stoves have been improved to burn 85 percent cleaner, according to Regency Fireplace Products.
This is achieved through burning the smoke before it escapes out the chimney. The smoke is burn ed with a honeycomb coated catalytic combustor.

Other improvements such as masonry and soapstone heaters and new processed wood fuels such as sawdust and wax firelogs have reduced harmful emissions releasing into the atmosphere.

A basic price for a wood stove is about $1,600, Ewan said.

"One of my clients has already seen a tremendous savings on his $400-a-month heating bill," he said.

"With increased economic uncertainty, saving money on energy is coming into focus now," Ewan said.

Another alternative to fossil fuels is solar electricity. Ewan fits new homes with solar equipment so they are not hooked-up to PG&E. "The price to hook up solar is very competitive to that of PG&E," he said.

Amory Lovins, an energy consultant, has built a house in Colorado that is equipped to get all its energy from solar power.

"It is not only more comfortable than our old house, which had three furnaces, it only added 1 percent to the construction costs and paid for itself in 10 months," said Lovins.

"It is possible technically and economically, to achieve energy independence. Examples are everywhere," said Ewan, citing insulating, weather stripping windows and taking the bus as examples.

Budget cuts at the Office of Energy continue our reliance on oil and nuclear power, said Ewan.

"That is absolutely stupid," he said. "Even if oil and nuclear power have a place, there is still a huge amount of other energy resources to be studied."

Ewan said part of the problem is that Americans do not pay the "true cost" for fossil fuels.

"If we did, Americans would be really careful of their use of energy," he said. "One true cost is the situation going on right now in Iraq."

Monday night to Tuesday morning, and claimed 20 of the attacks were on residential targets in Baghdad and other cities.

They said six missiles had hit Iraq, including one that exploded in Baghdad and another in Tikrit, Saddam Hussein's hometown north of the capital.

The U.S.-led allied command says it has limited the air bombardment to military and other strategic targets.

Also Tuesday, Iraq claimed U.S. warplanes had hit the Shiite Muslim shrines of Najaf and Karbala, south of Baghdad. It also accused Israel of taking part.

"The blind malice of the imperialist (Americans) and Zionists (Israelis) reached its peak when they deliberately fired their malicious shells at the sacred sites," said Baghdad radio.

The radio called President Bush the "enemy of God and humanity."

Iraq claims to hold more than 20 POWs, and the allies have listed 24 airmen as missing in action.
